

New EISCC Board and Officers

Destiny Bachman is treasurer of the Moebius Syndrome Foundation, a national nonprofit, and is a member of the South Bellevue Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Destiny is joining the Board as EISCC Treasurer.

Sam Basta is a Bellevue business owner and permanent Catholic deacon who has devoted many years to serving the Church and the wider community. Ordained in 2007, he has served in parish, hospital and prison ministries, Operation Nightwatch, and programs supporting people experiencing poverty and homelessness. He also serves on the Bellevue Police Department's Interfaith Advisory Council. As the founder of several successful businesses, Sam brings extensive experience in leadership, innovation, problem-solving, and community partnership. He welcomes the opportunity to serve on the EISCC board, working alongside people of different faith traditions to address human needs and strengthen the Eastside community.

Mike Mathias, NCPS, CRS, is the founder and Executive Director of Anything Helps, a Seattle nonprofit that helps people experiencing homelessness find and keep housing and work through Washington's Foundational Community Supports program. He came to the work through his own eight months of unsheltered homelessness and is a Nationally Certified Peer Specialist and a Lead Fidelity Reviewer for the Washington State Health Care Authority's supportive housing programs. He believes people are the experts of their own lives and that those closest to problems are often closest to solutions.

Nickhath ("Nicky") Sheriff is the founder of two influential nonprofit organizations—the Muslim Community Resource Center (MCRC) and Essentials First (which she now heads as the CEO). Through them, Nicky has transformed bold ideas into thriving organizations that deliver critical services to vulnerable individuals and families throughout the region. A first-generation immigrant, mother of three, and champion for equity and inclusion, she has dedicated her career to creating opportunities for underserved communities and empowering individuals to thrive.
